1. Following up on Colonel Lovell's suggestions for speeding up the handling of Japanese documents, the matter was discussed informally with Admiral Schuirmann. He appeared to understand the magnitude of the task we are facing and the difficulty of attempting to segregate or separate the Navy material from the Army material.

2. He expressed general concurrence in the suggestion that the translation outfit at Ritchie be a joint Army-Navy activity. I think Lovell will like this idea. He should prepare the communications to the Navy for my signature based on the above.
